Abstract

A printer module receives a message from an attached computer that is requesting a secure printing key. The printer module generates a key in response to the received message, and sends the key to the attached computer requesting the key. The printer module executes in some embodiments of the invention in a Java virtual machine, and provides communication with the attached computers via a web server module executing within the printer.